Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 112

1. The following is a quotation of the second paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

The specification shall conclude with one or more claims particularly pointing out and distinctly claiming the subject matter which the applicant regards as his invention.

Regarding claim 1, line 5, the phrase "such as" renders the claim indefinite because it is unclear whether the limitations following the phrase are part of the claimed invention. See MPEP § 2173.05(d). Also in the same line 5, "like" renders the claim indefinite.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

2. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

3. Claims 1 and 3-9 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Iseberg et al. (U.S. patent 5,887,070).

Regarding claims 1 and 9, Iseberg teaches an earpad (the eartip 38) that is adapted to be inserted and detachably set in an auditory meatus. The earpad has a hollow and cylindrical basic body (44) and a number of gathered sound insulating walls (39, 40, 41) of the same material as the basic body as claimed (figures 1 and 2).

Iseberg does not specifically teach the hollow cylindrical basic body (44) and the insulating walls (39, 40, 41) of the earpad (38) that are made of an elastic material. However, it is known in the art to provide the earpad or eartip that is made of elastic material.

Art Unit: 2643

Since Iseberg does teach the earpad (38) to be made of soft compliant material; it therefore would have been obvious to one skilled in the art to provide the earpad (38) of Iseberg to be made of any soft compliant material such as an elastic material for better a sealing and providing a comfort to the wearer.

Regarding claim 4, Iseberg shows the sound insulating wall that is provided in the direction crossing at right angles the center line of the basis body (figure 1), and the wall thickness of the sound insulating wall (41) becomes smaller toward the outer periphery thereof (figure 2).

Regarding claim 5, Iseberg shows the sound insulating wall that has the same thickness of its entire portion and is slightly slanted backward to the rear edge side, and further the wall thickness of the sound insulating wall (41) becomes smaller toward the outer periphery thereof (figure 2).

Regarding claim 6, Iseberg teaches the sound insulating wall that includes air bubbles having the sound absorbing capability as claimed (col. 3, lines 39-45).

Regarding claim 7, as shown in figure 2, the sound insulating wall (39) has the diameter as claimed.

Regarding claim 8, Iseberg does not specifically show a number of sound insulating walls as claimed. However, Iseberg does estimate a plurality of sound insulating walls for the earpad or eartip (38).

Art Unit: 2643

Therefore, it would have been obvious to one skilled in the art to provide any number of sound-insulating walls for the Iseberg eartip (38) such as five to ten sound insulting walls to provide a better sealing to the ear canal.

Conclusion

4. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure.

Schier (U.S. patent 2,521,414) teaches a rubber cone that has a plurality of soft rubber discs (31) for the ear tip.
